The Department of History and Geography announces two new dissertation fellowships:

The Benjamin W. Schmidt Memorial Scholarship

The Schmidt Scholarship is provided by the generosity of Teresa and David R. Schmidt, M.D., in honor of their son Marine Lance Corporal Benjamin W. Schmidt, a scout sniper who was killed in Helmand Province, Afghanistan on October 6, 2011. It enables one TCU graduate student in History each year to work exclusively on his or her dissertation for one academic year. This most prestigious award in the graduate program provides $25,000 and tuition hours to support the completion of a doctoral dissertation. It is open to PhD candidates who have exhausted normal departmental funding, shown exceptional professional promise, and should be able to complete a doctoral dissertation with one additional year of financial support. The award carries no obligation to work for the department and working outside the department is prohibited as the recipient is expected to dedicate him or herself full time to the dissertation. The award is non-renewable.

Departmental Dissertation Fellowship

This award provides $20,000 and tuition hours to one graduate student to support the completion of a doctoral dissertation. It is open to PhD candidates who have exhausted normal departmental funding, shown exceptional professional promise, and should be able to complete a doctoral dissertation with one additional year of financial support. The award carries no obligation to work for the department and working outside the department is prohibited as the recipient is expected to dedicate him or herself full time to the dissertation. The award is non-renewable.

Application Deadline (for both): February 20

To apply, submit the following to the department chair:

- A five-page dissertation prospectus which clearly explains the main thesis of the dissertation, its original contribution to the field, discussion of key primary sources or archives, and the current status of the dissertation.
- Any chapters already drafted.
- A two-page curriculum vita.
- A letter from the applicant’s major professor.
